

There is no truth in the story that a serious accident has occurred to Otto Lilienthal, the famous "flying man," whose development of flying machines, with birds as his models, has been watched with interest the world over. The facts in the case are as follows: Fifteen days ago, not last Sunday, at Cross Lichterfelde, and not at Lichterveldo, Belgium, Otto Lilienthal was experimenting with one of his machines. He sustained a slight fall, but was entirely uninjured, and the machine was only slightly damaged.
